Your new vehicle looks great, and you will likely want to keep it that way for a long time; not only for appearances, but also for resale.

Unfortunately, everyday driving conditions can make it difficult. Whether driving to and from work, parked in a parking lot, or even in your driveway or garage, there is always some sort of risk of damage to your vehicle much of which is almost impossible to prevent.

Even the most careful of owners can lose their keys, ding a door, or even scrape a wheel. As small as they may seem, these little dents and dings, scratches or missing key fobs can put a damper on your car's appearance and affect its resale value.
